

Abstract

The Talk addresses how to educate people to a world where innovation is becoming more central and related to digital technologies. A discussion is presented about innovative methodologies compatible with this panorama, pointing to economic and social development in which innovation is strategic to meet the new educational requirements.