Abstract

Sequences have important applications in communications, radar and cryptography, and have close connections with combinatorial objects such as difference sets and difference families. In this talk, we shall introduce the applications of some combinatorial objects in sequence design.